ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA.
At Rules held in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court of Harrison County, on Monday, the 20th day of December, 1915, the following order was entered:
To Citizens National Bank of Connellsville, a corporation, and P. H. Markell, Plaintiff, vs.
In Chancery.
Harrison-Doddridge Coal & Coke Company, a corporation, Jasper Augustine, Josiah V. Thompson, Joseph E. Barnes, James R. Barnes, Alfred J. Cochran, Commonwealth Trust Company of Pittsburgh, a corporation, Trustee, Ellen G. Davis, a corporation, and Cornelia Bassel as executrix of the last will and testament of John Bassel, deceased, Defendants.

Object of suit.
1. The general object of the suit is to have cancelled two separate releases executed by Jasper Augustine, one to Alfred J. Cochran, and one to Joseph E. Barnes, each dated the 21st day of December, 1910, each recorded in the Office of the Clerk of the County Court of Harrison County, and of Doddridge County, West Virginia.

2. To declare the null and void of the releases.

for developing standards of rural child welfare, physical standards for children in industry, and standards of law for the protection of all children, is the key note of the third annual report of the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor which was made public today.

Three-Fifths of All children in the United States are rural children. What are the facts as to rural child welfare? They are not known. But it is noteworthy that the percentage of illiteracy in rural communities, according to the 1910 census, is double that in cities.

Where the rural child labor is great, the percentage of child illiteracy is high. The juvenile delinquency laws on the statute books of most of the states are ineffective over the greater part of these states because rural probation officers are lacking, and the figures of correctional institutions show that the country is largely represented.

"Time and money are required to secure the facts about the physical, social and economic conditions surrounding rural children, but these conditions must be understood if we are to be sure that we are making progress in securing a fair chance for every child."

Dangers Never Yet Measured.
"As a general rule compulsory school attendance ceases at the age of 14 years, the crucial point of maturing life, which educator and physiologist will know to be the most critical period of growth. Yesterday great authorities were experimenting on the best methods of training their minds, of developing their bodily powers. Today the same children are beyond the reach of all this costly so-called education—they have gone to work."

After quoting the opinion of various scientists, the report continues: "Full and intelligent protection of the physique and mental powers of the youthful workers of this country requires costly and laborious studies in laboratory and in workshop. The children's bureau desires to submit the reasonableness of spending money to make them so that we may secure just standards for the use of labor, as new standards for material are being developed."

Standards Needed.
"Various states have secured commissions to review and codify the laws relating to children. The needs of unfortunate children have first engaged the attention of philanthropists. But in preparing a complete code for the children of all states, the rights of all children must be considered. The study of legislation affecting children in the various states and territories which the law requires the children's bureau to make should afford an increasing body of information at the service of those engaged in codifying the children's laws of any state."

Work of Bureau's Third Year.
The bureau reports a year of activity in dealing with eight different phases of child welfare. It has been studying the social causes of infant mortality, doing constructive work to child hygiene, co-operating in a general test of birth registration, preparing a report on social care of mental defective and of illegitimate children, reviewing the principles of community provision for reformation, counseling laws relating to children, and analyzing the administration of child labor laws and street trade regulations in selected typical states. It has also begun certain experimental activities which will prepare the way for the detailed studies of rural child welfare and the physical effects of child labor which it will undertake at some future time when staff and equipment permit.

Complete Catalogue of Child Welfare Laws.
The children's bureau has prepared a complete catalogue of child welfare laws in the various states. It is the first time that such a complete catalogue has been published. It is a valuable reference for all those interested in child welfare.
